- >
- >
- > Introduction:
- >
- > Founded nearly 90 years ago to promote informed and active
- > participation in government, the LWV was committed to sustaining an
- > effective democracy long before the term, “sustainability”, became
- > fashionable. Let’s look at a sampling of today’s LWVBC positions
- > with an eye toward sustainability in two arenas: the natural
- > environment and social policy.
- >
- > Sampling of positions:
- >
- > ENVIRONMENTAL PLANNING
- >
- > Growth Management:
- > Judge growth on its “environmental impact and its effect on the
- > social balance...”; Emphasize “carrying capacity of the land”,
- > “preservation of open space”, “agricultural preservation”, enhance
- > “opportunities for people of all ages, races and economic levels...”.
- >
- > Principles of Good Planning:
- > Consider long-range implications and recognize that “land use,
- > housing and transportation are interrelated”, “encourage the use of
- > alternate modes of transportation”.
- >
- > NATURAL RESOURCES
- >
- > Open Space Programs: Support “acquisition and resource management
- > of Open Space..”.
- >
- > Solid Waste Management: “..promote and manage waste reduction”,
- > “set long-term goals and standards for a comprehensive solid waste
- > management policy”, prioritize “source reduction education”.
- >
- > Transportation: Emphasize “alternatives to the automobile”.
- >
- > SOCIAL POLICY
- >
- > Schools: Support “coordination and financing, long-range planning
- > and open channels of communication”, prioritize “providing students
- > with basic tools for learning...”.
- >
- > Housing: Provide “subsidized housing for low income people”,
- > support “incentives for the construction of energy efficient
- > homes”, support “social impact statements to determine the effect
- > of other policies on affordable housing”.
- > Health Care: Support preventive care and health services, from > prenatal to comprehensive long-term care.

> Conclusions:
> While our positions do not overtly call for “sustainability”, nor > are they introduced by a preamble about how they promote > sustainability, they share an emphasis on the need to consider long > term effects of decisions, on the interconnectedness of decisions > across policy areas, and on the value of fairness. In these ways, > they promote sustainability in planning and management across > policy areas.
> Our challenge today is to adapt ourselves to make our League > sustainable. As an organization that has grown and thrived through > the depression, the Second World War, and the upheavals of the > second half of the 20th century, the League has changed with the > times. To continue to sustain our League, we must adapt to the new > virtual world of the internet and all that it implies, while > holding fast to our goal of promoting an informed and active > citizenry so essential to sustaining all that we hold dear.
